

Dr. Allan Stewart is an Associate Professor, Department of Cardiovascular Surgery and the Director of Aortic Surgery for the Mount Sinai Health System. He serves as Co-Director of the Valve Center and the Medical Director of Cardiology/Cardiac Surgery for Mount Sinai International. Dr. Stewart received his General Surgery at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania and then specialized in Cardiothoracic Surgery at Columbia University School of Medicine. His research interests in Aortic Surgery have generated over 40 manuscripts in peer-reviewed journals. He serves on the editorial board of JACC and as a reviewer for the Annals of Thoracic Surgery. He has operated and/or lectured in over 36 countries on five continents. He has trained over 20 physicians in aortic surgery, 11 of which currently hold the title of Director of Aortic Surgery in various departments throughout the United States. His clinical areas of interest is in complex aortic surgery, valve sparing aortic root replacement and TAVR.